

As Vatican Seeks Muslim Souls, Europe Fears U.S. Abandonment

[Die Welt, Germany]

La Stampa, Italy

"That fear, the secret resentfulness being felt after the generous, noble and non-generic speech in Cairo - is of being abandoned by America in the face of the relentless advancement of European Islamization, a phenomena which is due in part to the active collaboration of the Catholic Church."

EDITORIAL By Poet Guido Ceronetti

Translated By Enrico Del Sero

June 8, 2009

Italy - La Stamp - Original Article (Italian)

As far as future generations of Europeans are concerned, nothing could matter to me less. After having lived consciously through the better part of the 20th century, one knows that quite a few bitter pills have been swallowed. And yet, one can still imagine that in its unfathomable kitchen, the foreseeable future is preparing pills that are still more bitter - and those who would like newborns or the unborn in our ancient nations to be left with an easy path are foolishly insulting human destiny.

At least we can predict, with some relief, that no intra-European or Euro-Turkish war will ever be waged again - which doesn't imply in any way that Pólemos will begin to snore - that would be unthinkable. [Pólemos is a supernatural being or Daemon from Greek mythology, said to be part of the company of war spirits that haunted the battlefield].

As I write this note, it's still Election Day in Italy and elsewhere [E.U. elections]. And out of the votes of so many different peoples, the shadowy profile of meaning will emerge, definable beneath the surface of our collective unconscious - and we'll "draw the happy omens" if we scrutinize the viscera. [Editor's Note: This is reference to how ancient peoples would predict the future by examining the internal organs of a sacrificial victim, such as a chicken, a white bull - or even a prisoner of war].

President Obama makes his case in Cairo: The ripple effects of the speech continue to be felt around the world.

EGYPTIAN TV: President Obama delivers his long-awaited speech to the Muslim world, June 4, 00:55:45

The coincidence of the European elections and Obama's speech in Cairo is proof that Pólemos never sleeps. Obama's Islamic triumph has coincided with a class of reflexive reaction that is beyond Europe's media - which is one of fear. The triumphalist-pacifist echo of newspapers who don't reflect the voiceless who are handed a voting card - the faintest glimmer of sovereign power to be trampled upon by the real and prevailing authorities. This card can only be relied upon to be a warning light, with little capacity to influence. But it's no small achievement to catch a glimpse of something in the dance of information. [i.e.: While the votes don't really matter - at least one can learn something from them].

That fear, the secret resentfulness being felt after the generous, noble and non-generic speech in Cairo - is of being abandoned by America in the face of the relentless advancement of European Islamization, a phenomena which is due in part to the active collaboration of the Catholic Church (for bioethical reasons, due to the rise of secularism, and because of the unheard-of and desperate project involving a future monotheist partition of human souls in the cave vaticanum [Vatican cave]).

Editor's Note: According to Wikipedia, judging the weighing of souls [after death is an image of Christian theology and of some other religious traditions, according to which, the weighing of souls - the division of the blessed and the damned - is supposed to take place at the "end times." The author implies that the Vatican prefers monotheist Muslim souls to those of secular Europe].

The Weighing of Souls and division of the blessed and the damned,

Abraham's Bosom and the Jaws of Hell Detail of the Last Judgment

Window at Bourges Cathedral, France, dating from 1215-25 AD.

If Europe (individual nations or the ectoplasm at the E.U. Parliament in Strasbourg that may one day become a substantial body) plans to oppose Islamization by relying on parties that are openly or tacitly obedient to the Catholic Church, it had better know that it's been a long time since the walls of Vienna fell and the Greek fire of Naupactus has died out: St. Peter's dome hides a column of sand [the Pope no longer has the backbone or strength that it used to]. In-sha-allah [Arabic for if God wills] ...

[Editor's Note: The ultimate failure of the Siege of Vienna in 1529 and the Ottoman Empire's exhaustive attempt to capture what was bastion of the Catholic Holy Roman Empire, turned the tide against almost a century of unchecked Muslim conquest in east and central Europe. By pointing to the Siege of Vienna and the Siege of Constantinople in 1453 (Greek fire of Naupactus) - the author highlights how much weaker the Catholic Church is today].

Out of the time of the last two Popes has come an awareness that Islam is winning. (Ratzinger [Pope Benedict XVI] surrendered soon after the trial balloon at Regensburg). There are variations on this pessimistic certainty, but the political determination seems to be marked by a will to "salvage what one can." It's the tragic choice of Pius XII all over again: better Hitler than Stalin. For Benedict XVI, it's: better Islam than birth control, than a Jacobin Europe, than gay marriage, than an unrestrained (we're just at the beginning) freedom and the matriarchal revenge of women. If patriarchy is put in doubt, the Church erects walls and Islam wages war. (Their alliance isn't unnatural).

Editor's Note: The [trial balloon at Regensburg that the author refers to was a 2006 speech that Pope Benedict gave in Regensburg, Germany, which created a crisis with the Muslim World. The Pope said in part: "Show me just what Muhammad brought that was new, and there you will find things only evil and inhuman, such as his command to spread by the sword the faith he preached.]"

[Al-Ahram, Egypt]

Apart from some cooperation among national police bodies, Europe has so far sought to be blithely unarmed. What supranational protection do people [Europeans] vote for? Everywhere, the gigantic Euro-mollusk presents itself as being without land or sea borders. Its super-expensive and super-equipped warships that battle pirates never even hold target practice! To anything implying the use of force, Europe is a conscientious objector; but without that dismal use - one can find neither a state nor a supra-State. Who knows? Perhaps they're waiting to delegate all armed defense to the Turks, who don't object.

If Eurovoters, both those who vote or who abstain, give in to a fear that has nothing to do with the obsessions induced by the economic powers, it means that their most deeply-felt motivations are to be found elsewhere. It means that their real fear - the eternal one felt by a weak and threatened animal - cannot be calmed with distracting sermons.

In fact, events are so pressing and bizarrely intertwined, that souls which are stunned or dead and who are destined to occupy those heavenly seats [in the E.U. Parliament] will hardly find time to develop themselves into real men and women, and bring forth from among them a new captain Mac Whirr, the unappealing character of Joseph Conrad's Typhoon.